WINNER

Vintner Rob Torres makes wine during last year's Dover Downs Hotel & Casino Wine & Music Festival. Torres, of SomethingWine in Wilmington, will hold several wine-making classes again at this year's event.

Wine-Making Classes

Wine-making classes will be hosted by SomethingWine, a Wilmington-based wine-making supply business. SomethingWine sells equipment, wine juice kits and fresh varietal grapes and juice twice a year, imported in May from Chile and trucked in September through October from California. SomethingWine offers advice for the beginner as well as the advanced.

This year, its second at the festival, SomethingWine will focus on fermentation through completion to bottling. The class is an open forum during which audience participation is encouraged through a question and answer format. During each class, a variety of homemade white, red and sweet wines will be available to sample.

Visit SomethingWine at www.somethingwine.com, and don't miss the cultural event of 2009, hosted by vintner Robert Torres.

The Wine List

Here's a sampling of some of the wines that will be available at the festival. Participating distributors include NKS Beverage Group, United Distributors, Southern Wine & Spirits and PortoVino Groovy Italian Wines.
